83% BUILD TAXPAYER-FINANCED PROJECTS HERE, ALWAYS.

"Large infrastructure projects that are paid for with taxpayer money, like the San Francisco Bay Bridge, should be built in America, by American workers, using American steel and other products, so that we know it is structurally sound and so we can create more American jobs instead of having our tax money create jobs in foreign countries."

11% GO WITH THE LOWEST BIDDER

"With State and local governments facing huge deficits, with taxes too high, and with education and public safety already being cut, large infrastructure projects, like the San Francisco Bay Bridge, should be built by the lowest bidder, regardless of where the low bidder is getting their products from, so we can make the most efficient use of our tax dollars."
